In today's competitive marketplace business owners and managers agree that protecting the health and safety of their employees is one of their most important responsibilities. If your business can't justify hiring an experienced safety and environmental professional, that responsibility is often delegated to someone who already has a full time job!

Initially this is thought to be an adequate approach, it rarely works and most organizations don't realize a reduction of risk or improved productivity from their financial and human resources. Not to mention the regulatory
